1. On p. 8, the Applicant argues that Casey fails to teach exhaust ports between a first deposition area and a second deposition area.

The Examiner respectfully disagrees. Casey depicts in fig. 2 a vacuum (i.e. exhaust) pump [31] between two deposition areas [11], [13]. Rauschnabel et al depicts in fig. 4 an apparatus with two deposition areas [61], [62] with a separate chamber areas [47], [50] separated from said deposition areas [61], [62] by partitions in a similar design as Casey. When the vacuum pump design of Casey is incorporated into the apparatus of Rauschnabel et al as indicated in the previous Office Action, vacuum pumps are present in Rauschnabel et al as depicted in fig. 4 between deposition areas [61], [62] at chamber areas [47], [50], with motivation for making this modification being to restrict gas leakage between adjacent chambers (abstract), thus leading to increased purity and control of deposition material for each chamber.

2. On p. 8, the Applicant argues that Casey does not allow for two exhaust ports to be located on different sidewalls due to the circular nature of the apparatus.

The Examiner respectfully disagrees. Casey is used to teach a pump between deposition areas and to individually pump deposition areas, Not to teach different sidewalls. Rauschnabel et al depicts in fig. 4 an apparatus having four distinct sidewalls. With the teaching of the vacuum (i.e. exhaust) pump configuration of Casey combined with the apparatus of Rauschnabel et al yields a four side-walled apparatus with vacuum pumps on different side walls between deposition areas [61], [62], with motivation for making this modification being to restrict gas leakage between adjacent chambers (abstract), thus leading to increased purity and control of deposition material for each chamber.

3. On p. 9, the Applicant argues that the claimed configuration of exhaust ports of amended claim 1 is not a mere duplication of parts, but is used to provide a separation between the first and second film deposition areas without implanting a physical partition between the first and second film deposition areas.

The Examiner respectfully disagrees. There is no claim limitation stating that a partition between a first deposition area and second deposition area does or does not exist..
